

Communication and Conflict Resolution Expectations

In the Nursing profession, you are expected to always communicate in a professional manner. This includes all verbal, non-verbal, and written communication with peers, clinical partners, college staff, college faculty, and college administration.

When a conflict arises, it is the expectation that the student will first address the concern with the other party in a professional manner, and if there is no resolution, they will then follow the chain of command.